ABOUT ME

I'm a seasoned homeschool mom of three boys. Having homeschooled from the beginning, I bring my passion for hands-on activities, history, geography, unit studies and lapbooks to my sons. Organization is a must too. After living in South America, I make my home in the Dallas area, Texas. Milk chocolate, strawberry shortcake and coffee rock my world!

ABOUT MY BLOG

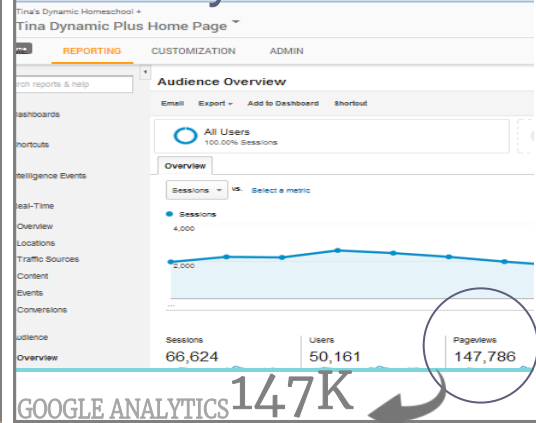

I am a girl who loves lapbooking, history, anything hands-on when it comes to learning, organizing all I can anytime whether it's school, my home, or one drawer, creating my own printables, speaking at workshops and conventions, talking about every possible and conceivable subject that has to do with homeschooling and I have a soft place in my heart for new homeschoolers.

MY SPONSORS

What they SAY:

Tina has served as a brand ambassador for a new product launch.. referral traffic from her blog posts resulted in significant sales – well beyond the compensation we invested in her. Her promotion is consistent, organic, creative, and detailed. And best of all, her audience is receptive to buying.

Tyler Hogan,
President Bright Ideas Press

Tina has contributed to the Bookshark Blog for over a year. Her engaging posts drive an incredible amount of traffic to our site. I truly appreciate her ability to connect with our customers and the homeschool market.
