

Why is the Amazon called the Lungs of the World?
How valuable are your lungs to you?

Add your facts or use the ones given.

Lungs of the World

The Amazon is often called the lungs of the world because it produces more than 20 percent of the world's oxygen. Rain forests play a significant part in the health of our global environment by digesting and converting carbon dioxide into oxygen.